Dear Sir:

The list of Basic Source Materials relating to the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy indicates that as of 1 February 1964, you had approximately fifty-nine reports on file in the National Archives. All of these reports were withheld from researchers at that time.

I would like to know if any of these documents are now de-classified and are now available and if so, which ones. If they are not, is there any way a researcher might have access to them? I know that there is an Executive Order which provides persons with proper clearance (researchers) to examine Defense Department documents at the National Archives, and I was wondering if perhaps it could be used in a case such as this one.

Very truly yours,

Emory L Brown Jr.
